

Insurance for small businesses with flood risks

What are the key risks posed by flooding?

Flooding can have a devastating impact on your small business, causing damage to your premises, fittings and fixtures, plant and equipment and stock and disrupting your ability to trade.

Even businesses outside of the flood zones can feel the impact of flooding, with supply chain disruption affecting their ability to access goods and demand surge increasing the difficulty of accessing some services.

Who should consider insurance? Did you know?

While you can't control the weather, insurance can help to protect small businesses across Australia from the risks posed by flooding to both their premises and trading. Any business located on a creek, lake or river should consider adding a flood insurance extension to their property policy.

"Flood insurance covers the situation when normally dry land is covered by water that has escaped or being released from a lake, river, creek or other natural watercourse, or a reservoir, canal or dam."

Policy exclusions, the excesses you need to pay and limits of liability can vary greatly depending on your insurer and the requirements of your business.

Case Study

Vicki operates a popular riverside restaurant in NSW, which is flooded when an intense east coast low causes rainfall that results in the river bursting its banks. The flood water inundates the building damaging stock, fittings and fixtures. However, as Vicki had understood her flood risk and added both a flood extension and business interruption insurance to her business pack policy, she was fully insured for both the physical damage caused to her business and the loss of trade.
